

Personalised Learning Pathways Guidelines

Rationale:

These guidelines provide schools with the key information to support the effective development and implementation of Personalised Learning Pathways (PLPs) for Aboriginal and/ or Torres Strait

Islander students.

Central to the implementation of this recommendation were the voices of Aboriginal families and community. Through strong relationships, collaboration, and partnerships with schools, staff and families we will see Aboriginal students achieve their aspirations and educational potential.

Personalised Learning Pathways are an active and continuous process. They are developed in consultation and collaboration with the student, families and teachers, to identify, organise and apply personal approaches to learning and engagement for success.

Personalised Learning Pathways can have short term and/or long-term goals. Short term goals can be specific stepping stones to reach long term goals. Essential to this process is the monitoring, reviewing and celebration of goals achieved and setting of new goals to ensure our Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students are always progressing in a forward motion.

It is highly recommended that all Aboriginal and/ or Torres Strait Islander students have a PLP that is tailored to the student and is regularly reviewed, updated and celebrated.

Timeframe for use:

The PLP document is used by schools to ensure Aboriginal and/ or Torres Strait Islander students and their families are actively engaged in meaningful planning and decision-making in education. PLP conversations are of great importance as they identify and strengthen shared understandings of aspirational goals, expectations and responsibilities.

It is strongly recommended that PLPs be reviewed, and monitored at least once a term with students, teachers, PLP mentors and families. Regular check-ins are key to the success of the process.

Intended audience:

All NSW Public Schools.

Instructions for use:

Schools can seek the assistance from the Aboriginal Education Team, Teaching Quality, and Impact Directorate to facilitate professional learning around this resource. The professional learning course aims to build participants understanding of how to address school and system priorities by using the 'Reflect, Plan and Act' tool within the Turning Policy into Action (TPiA) document. Participants will learn how to embed an Aboriginal lens within the school planning cycle as part of the commitment to improvement in line with the School Excellence Framework. Further details on the professional course can be found on MyPL – Course Identifier NR29292.

Alignment to system priorities and/or needs: This resource also supports and aligns to:

- Aboriginal Education Policy
- Australian Professional Standards for Teachers
- NSW Department of Education Strategic Plan 2018 – 2023.

Alignment to School Excellence Framework: This resource aligns to all aspects of the Learning Domain - Learning Culture, Wellbeing, Curriculum, Assessment, Reporting and Student Performance Measures. Further alignment can be made across the Teaching and Leading Domains.

Consulted with: These guidelines were developed in collaboration with the School Performance, Teacher Quality and Impact Directorate and NSW Aboriginal Education Consultative Group Inc (NSW AECG).

1. Background and context

Personalised Learning Pathways were a formal recommendation from the 2004 Aboriginal Education Review, in genuine partnership and collaboration with the NSW Department of Education and NSW Aboriginal Education Consultation Group Incorporated (NSW AECG).

Recommendation 28 of the review noted that each Aboriginal student have a “personalised plan that will be developed by the school in partnership with parents/caregivers and include targets for learning against syllabus outcomes and agreed family support strategies, eg home reading strategies, attendance, transition from primary to secondary education”.

Central to the implementation of this recommendation were the voices of Aboriginal families and community. Through strong relationships, collaboration, and partnerships with schools, staff and families we will see Aboriginal students achieve their aspirations and educational potential.

These guidelines provide schools with the key information to support the effective development and implementation of Personalised Learning Pathways (PLPs) for Aboriginal and/ or Torres Strait Islander students.

2. Personalised Learning Pathways for Aboriginal and/ or Torres Strait Islander students

What are PLPs?

Personalised Learning Pathways are an active and continuous process. They are developed in consultation and collaboration with the student, their families/ carers and teachers, to identify, organise and apply personal approaches to learning and engagement for success.

Personalised Learning Pathways can have short term and/or long-term goals. Short term goals can be specific stepping stones to reach long term goals. Essential to this process is the monitoring, reviewing and celebration of goals achieved and setting of new goals to ensure our Aboriginal and/ or Torres Strait Islander students are always progressing in a forward motion.

Why are PLPs important?

It is highly recommended that all Aboriginal and/ or Torres Strait Islander students have a PLP that is tailored to the student and is regularly reviewed, updated and celebrated.

To enable teachers to provide tailored support for each student's learning, it is important that PLPs be developed for all Aboriginal and/ or Torres Strait Islander students, including those who have additional learning needs or have high potential and/ or gifted and talented (SEF reference: Learning Domain- Student Performance measures). PLPs for high potential and/ or gifted and talented students should record the implementation of appropriate educational strategies and differentiated curricula needed to support exceptional learners to fulfil their potential. (SEF reference: Teaching Domain-Effective Classroom Practice)

Aspirational goals and the mapping of learning pathways are an important part of PLPs. 'An Aboriginal student with high aspirations has a 71% chance of attaining an HSC compared to 49% for an Aboriginal student with low aspirations' (CESE 2021).

What are the key features of an effective PLP?

The holistic nature of PLPs allows students' academic, social/emotional, wellbeing and cultural needs to be addressed. PLPs aim to enhance outcomes for Aboriginal students, with a focus to improve student engagement, attendance, retention, transition points, HSC attainment and post-schooling options.

An effective PLP must:

- Honour the voices of students and their families/ carers
- Be owned by the student, and engage the student's voice in the development monitoring, review and celebration processes
- Authentically be developed in genuine partnership with families and support staff where required
- Record student's academic goals and aspirations in a context that takes into account the student's spiritual, cultural, emotional, social and physical health and wellbeing
- Ensure schools and community include cultural goals that provide opportunities that engage students to create a deep sense of identity, connection and belonging
- Contain specific, measurable, achievable, realistic, time bound, evaluative and rewarding (SMARTER) goals that support students to realise their goals and potential
- Discuss all relevant transition points and post schooling pathways
- Be easily accessible and regularly communicated to students, families and staff
- Ensure that during the development and monitoring of PLPs staff utilise language that respects the integrity and beliefs of families/ carers, avoiding educational jargon and acronyms where possible
- Include a literacy and numeracy component for all students to support and enhance student learning outcomes, and
- Foster an opportunity for high expectations across all areas and promotes leadership experiences.

Where possible schools should utilise the knowledge and expertise of their Local/ Regional NSW AECG in the development and consultation of their PLPs. Under the NSW AECG and NSW Department of Education Partnership Agreement, schools are expected to genuinely consult with the AECG on all matters relating to Aboriginal Education.

3. Personalised Learning Pathways implementation process

Engaging Families

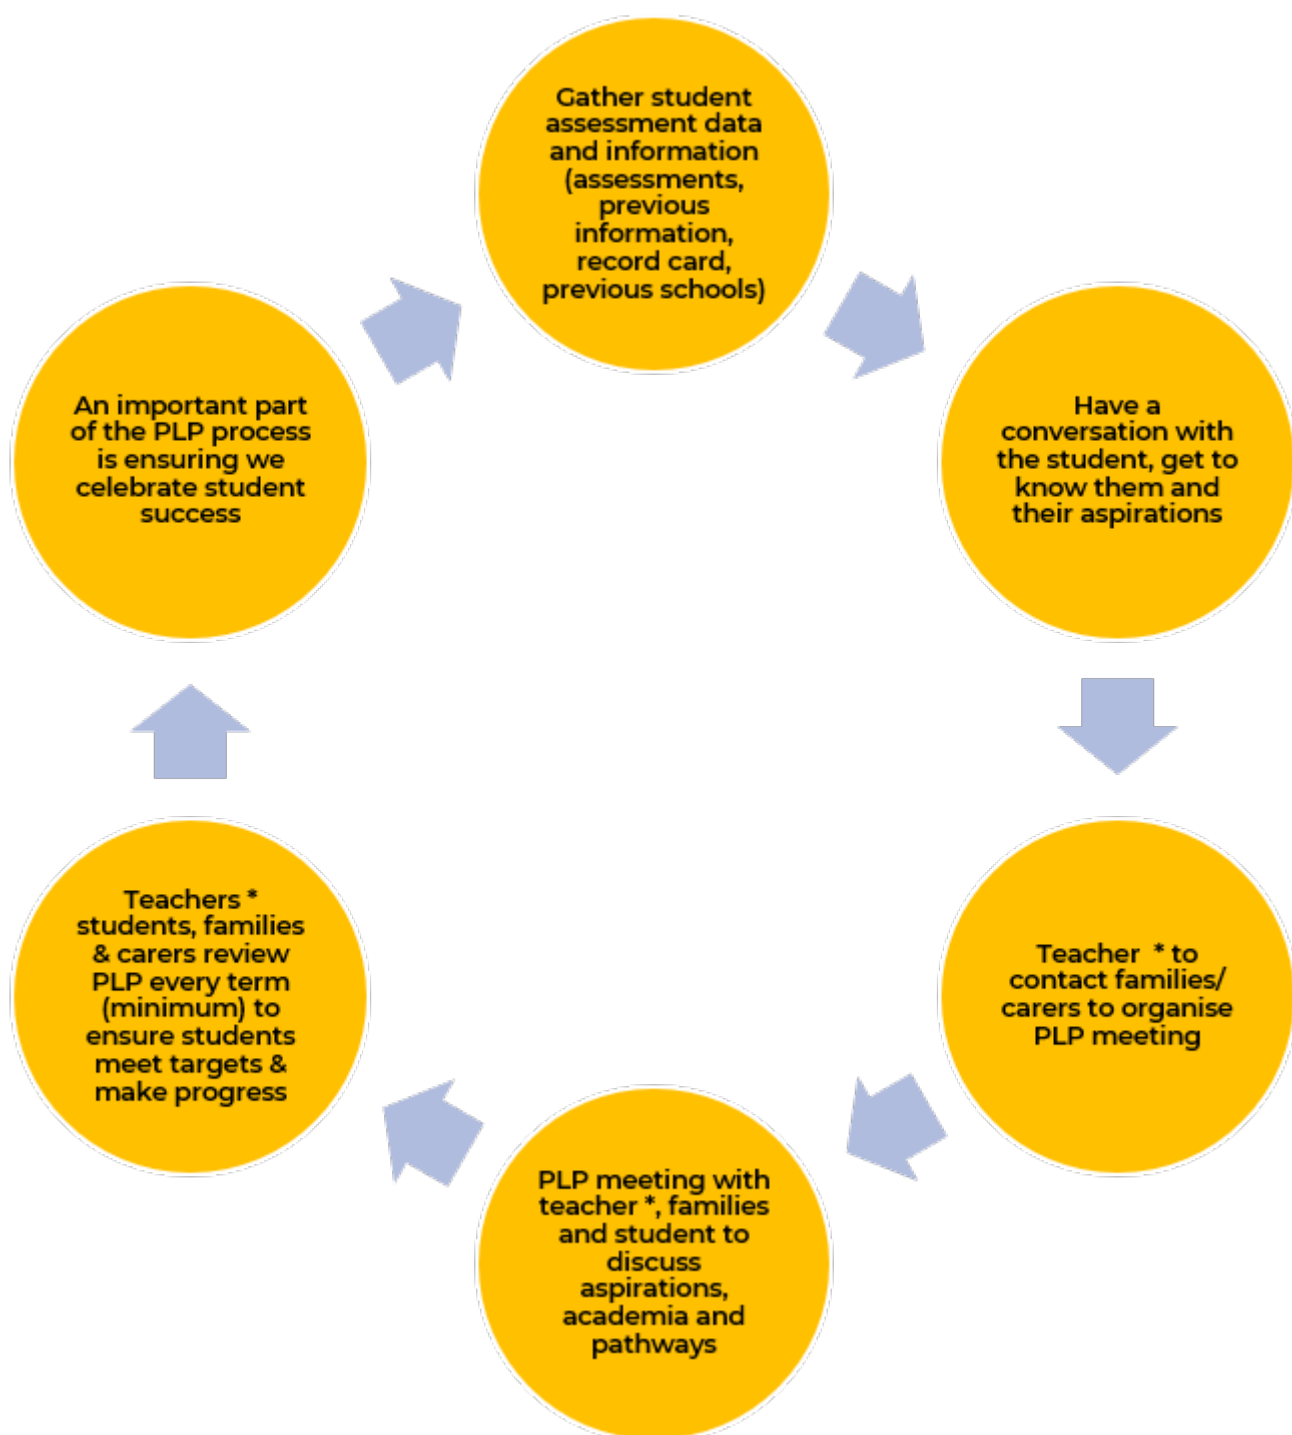

The PLP document is used by schools to ensure Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students and their families are actively engaged in meaningful planning and decision-making in education. PLP conversations are of great importance as they identify and strengthen shared understandings of aspirational goals, expectations and responsibilities.

Research shows that families and teachers have a significant influence on students' aspirations, goals and motivation (Gemici 2014).

These conversations need to be respectful and genuine. Maintaining confidentiality and privacy is critical to building trust and respect among Aboriginal and/ or Torres Strait Islander families.

It is important that families understand why schools need to gather specific information and how it will be used to support the PLP process.

PLP Implementation Process Model

* Teacher – refers to Classroom teacher and PLP Mentor

There are multiple entrance points into the PLP monitoring and review process:

- An effective PLP is owned by the student. Engaging students in the monitoring and review process promotes active learning and personal empowerment.
- Through the continuous assessment process, teachers, PLP mentors and specialist support staff may refer to the PLP document throughout the year and make annotations outlining evidence of goals achieved. This evidence can be discussed with the student and family/ carers during informal and formal conversations.

PLP Templates

There is no state wide PLP template. It is highly recommended that schools create their own PLP template in partnership with their local community and where possible Local AECG. It is crucial that this template is localised and contextualised to the community and students. Please refer to Section 6 for recommended sample templates.

Ongoing monitoring and review of PLPs

It is strongly recommended that PLPs be reviewed, and monitored at least once a term with students, teachers, PLP mentors and families/ carers. Regular check-ins are key to the success of the process. This can involve informal conversations with students and families. Engaging students in the monitoring and review process promotes active learning and personal empowerment.

PLPs in conjunction with other student plans

It's critical that students who require additional plans have a PLP that supports and includes all relevant learning plans to ensure successful learning outcomes.

4. Contextualising your Personalised Learning Pathways to your school setting

Schools should have an Aboriginal Education Advisory Committee that includes Local AECG representation and supports a culture of high expectations and community engagement, resulting in sustained and measurable whole-school improvement.

Building a relationship between schools and local families/ carers and communities will enhance the learning experience of students and promote reconciliation through better understanding. PLPs enable Aboriginal and/ or Torres Strait Islander students to actively participate in decision-making at school on matters which shape their educational experiences.

To be successful, schools must value the perspectives and opinions of students and act on them in a way that genuinely shapes learning and decision-making.

PLPs in Primary settings

Implementation

1.1.8 These commitments affirm the inherent right of Aboriginal students to fair, equitable, culturally inclusive and significant educational opportunities so that all students obtain a high-quality education as a platform for enriching their life chances and achieving their full potential. Aboriginal Education Policy.

The PLP process must adhere to the 2004 review recommendations which are to ensure active relationships are built between classroom teachers*, students and their families/ carers. In all primary settings a three-way process must be established by the student's classroom teacher, with an active voice and ownership by the students and strongly supported by their families/ carers.

Classroom teachers need to identify a locally developed PLP proforma that is contextualised to the needs of the school community and families. Contact must be made with families/ carers to attend an initial meeting with the classroom teacher and the student.

It is the responsibility of this meeting to follow the PLP process (page 6) to identify SMARTER, cultural and aspirational goals for students. If required, classroom teachers are encouraged to invite appropriate staff, including learning and support teams and Aboriginal education staff to participate in the PLP process. Accountability must sit with the classroom teacher to ensure effective implementation of PLPs.

Regular review meetings must occur termly as well as regular check-in meetings.

PLPs are a genuine process whereby students have a strong voice, that is supported by families/ carers and guided by classroom teachers.

* Classroom teacher is the designated teacher the student spends the majority of their time.

Roles and Responsibilities

Classroom Teacher

- The process of the PLP is initiated and implemented by the classroom teacher
- PLPs are a three-way process whereby teachers establish genuine relationships with students and their families/ carers
- Teachers meet with students and families/ carers to identify, discuss and record student strengths and aspirations
- Establish clear, concise and meaningful goals that are monitored, reviewed and celebrated, and
- Establish and ensure a culturally safe environment that supports and enhances educational pathways.

Support Teachers/other Staff

- PLPs are not the responsibility of the Support team
- Their role is not to drive the process but to support and enhance
- Where and when possible, Aboriginal education support staff are to support the process only.

Executive Level

- Drive school systems and processes to ensure that PLPs are regularly implemented, monitored, reviewed and celebrated.

Aboriginal Education Officers/Workers/ Aboriginal Student Learning Support Officer

- Actively support teachers and school staff in strengthening community links with families/ carers, students and schools.

Aboriginal Education Advisory Committee

- Facilitates conversations with executive members and staff around key decision making, cultural opportunities and supports school PLP processes.

Aboriginal Community Liaison Officers

- Support schools in making genuine connections with their local Aboriginal Community/organisations
- Provide cultural support and advocacy for students and families.

Transition Points

- PLPs provide a solid foundation to support Aboriginal and/ or Torres Strait Islander students as they transition through their schooling. From school readiness to post-school pathways, each journey is unique and must be underpinned by the individual student.
- Planning to support Aboriginal and/ or Torres Strait Islander students at each transitional milestone not only provides stability and continuity, but also improves student confidence.
- A successful PLP needs to acknowledge potential challenges experienced by our Aboriginal and/ or Torres Strait Islander students as they transition through their educational journey. Schools need to ensure a personalised approach to this process. One way this can be achieved through developing positive partnerships with students, families/ carers and community.
- Ensuring student readiness and preparedness is also key to this process.
- High quality, culturally inclusive early childhood education services and schools work with families and communities to set a strong foundation for early learning, including a child's transition to school.

PLPs in the Secondary setting

Implementation of PLPs in a Secondary Setting

The PLP Mentor

The PLP Mentor plays a crucial role in developing, implementing and reviewing of PLPs. This role can be undertaken by a school staff member who has a positive relationship with the student and is passionate about ensuring the aspirations and learning outcomes of the student are achieved. It is essential that the PLP Mentor has a deep understanding of the student's cultural, social, emotional and academic aspirations to ensure they can collaboratively support them in setting and achieving their goals.

A PLP Mentor can be:

- A classroom teacher
- Aboriginal Education Officer
- Aboriginal Student Learning Support Officer
- Student Learning Support Officer
- Year Advisor
- Roll Call/ Pastoral Care teacher
- Learning Support Teacher
- Head Teacher

Roles and Responsibilities

Role of the PLP Mentor

“No significant learning can occur without a significant relationship” as noted by James Comer.

The PLP Mentor allows Aboriginal and/ or Torres Strait Islander students to build real and meaningful connections with staff and promotes a culturally safe space that allows students be open, reflective and aspirational around their learning goals.

The role of the PLP Mentor:

- Make sure students are known, valued and cared for

- Develop, maintain, evaluate and celebrate the PLP in genuine partnership with the student and family/carer
- Ensure PLPs are a living, breathing document and communicated to relevant school staff
- Schedule regular ongoing formal and informal conversation that solidifies relational trust and ensures genuine implementation, reviewing and monitoring and promotes student engagement and improvement.

HSC Minimum Standard

- Supporting Aboriginal and/ or Torres Strait Islander student HSC attainment is a key Departmental priority. Ensuring PLPs explicitly support the achievement of minimum standards in the following areas; reading, writing and numeracy is key to achieving higher rates of retention and attainment.
- To support Aboriginal and/ or Torres Strait Islander students to successfully complete the HSC minimum standard assessments, schools may need to provide small group support workshops, student access to a homework or learning centres where possible or Aboriginal SLSO in class support.

Setting Career Goals/ Post-school options

- Through the use of PLPs schools should ensure they engage Aboriginal/ or and Torres Strait Islander students in high-quality vocational learning and VET programs. Doing this, supports successful transitioning from school to work.
- Through a personalised approach schools should tailor their programs to equip Aboriginal and/ or Torres Strait Islander students with the knowledge and skills they need to make informed study and work choices, and to successfully transition to life beyond school.
- Raising the aspirations and self-esteem of Aboriginal and/ or Torres Strait Islander secondary students helps to better engage them in making informed post-school career or study decisions. An important aspect of the PLP process is linking their skills, talents and interests with potential vocational and workforce options.
- Engaging key personnel such as the Careers Advisor and/or Transition Advisor ensures students can access work experience, structured work placements and real post-school options.

Critical Roles and Responsibilities

Student:

- Student voice and ownership is critical for the success of PLPs
- Active participants in their PLP
- Regular termly check in and review meetings with classroom teacher/PLP mentor.

Families/ carers and Community:

- Central to the PLP process are the voices of our families and community
- It is critical that we honour what families/ carers want for their children and what these students want for themselves
- The PLP process should actively seek to engage in genuine partnership and consultation with all key stakeholders to ensure they are meaningful, authentic living and breathing documents.

Principal:

- Principal accountability and leadership is key to the success of the PLP process
- Principals must ensure the implementation, support, release time and the monitoring by classroom teachers/PLP Mentor of the school's PLP process
- Establish culturally safe classrooms and meeting spaces for students and their families
- Provide all staff with appropriate PLP professional learning
- Ensure support staff are available to support classroom teachers/PLP mentors where and when possible
- Ensure schools and staff celebrate student achievements and reaching desired goals.

Aboriginal Community Liaison Officers:

- Support schools in making genuine connections with their local Aboriginal Community/organisations
- Provide cultural support and advocacy for students and families/ carers.

Aboriginal Education and Wellbeing Advisor in your area:

- The role of the Aboriginal Education and Wellbeing Advisor /officer in your area is to provide PLP professional learning to staff and schools.

Director/Executive Director:

- The Role of the Director and Executive Director in the PLP process is to encourage Principals to strengthen the capacity of their staff in the PLP process through professional learning and implementation, supported by their local Aboriginal Education and Wellbeing Advisor/Officer.

YEAR Personalised Learning Pathways confirmation

To be completed by the Principal

I confirm that at Insert School Name Personalised Learning Pathways (PLPs) have been developed for all Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander Students using the PLP Guidelines (2022 update). In the development of the PLPs I confirm that :

- Student voice has been engaged in the development, monitoring, reviewing and celebration processes
- Families and/or Carers have been involved in the development of their child's/young person's plan
- Individual student's academic goals and aspirations have been discussed
- Individual student's spiritual, cultural, emotional, social and physical health and wellbeing have been taken into account
- The School and family have included cultural goals that provide opportunities that engage students to create a deep sense of identity, connection and belonging
- Each PLP contains specific, measurable, achievable, realistic, time bound, evaluative and rewarding (SMARTER) goals that support students to realise their goals and potential
- We discussed all relevant transition points and post schooling pathways
- The PLPs are easily accessible and regularly communicated to students, families and staff
- During the development and monitoring of PLPs staff utilised language that respects the integrity and beliefs of families, avoiding educational jargon and acronyms where possible
- A literacy and numeracy component has been included for all students to support and enhance student learning outcomes
- Our school's process fosters an opportunity for high expectations across all areas and promotes leadership experiences
- All students and families/carers have been allocated a PLP mentor and are aware of the best contact details of their mentor
- All mentors are aware of their responsibilities in supporting students and families in the PLP process
- We are committed to reviewing all PLPs each term with students and families/carers and ensuring we celebrate student success.
