

Learning every day in every way through play

Playing games with others

Play board, card or traditional games with your child and include other members of the family.

More activities like this:

- Play games that require turn taking and have a purpose, for example duck duck goose, hide and seek, musical chairs, what's the time Mr Wolf?
- Play games that support physical skills, for example throwing a ball and measuring how far it goes, ring toss, ball games.
- Have discussions around fair and unfair behaviour that you observe day to day, for example when watching television.
- Engage in activities that require turn-taking, such as creating a story together and taking turns to make up the next sentence.

What children are learning:

- Following game rules and turn taking
- Developing awareness of fair and unfair play
- Developing language to communicate with others
- Being respectful of others and accepting when things don't go their way (resilience)
